

Melissa B. Weimer, DO, MCR is board-certified in general internal medicine and addiction medicine. She is an assistant professor in the Division of Internal Medicine at OHSU, Associated Program Director of the OHSU Addiction Medicine Fellowship, and the Medical Director at CODA, Oregon's largest non-profit substance abuse treatment center. She is an expert in the safe and effective use of opioids for the treatment of pain as well as treating opioid use disorders in primary care and specialty addictions care. Dr. Weimer leads health policy efforts to improve opioid prescribing safety in Oregon and expand addictions treatment. She has been involved in state and national efforts to improve physician knowledge about opioid safety and efficacy and addictions treatment since 2010. Her clinical and research career focuses on chronic pain management in primary care, medication assisted treatment for the treatment of substance use disorders, and ways to improve and promote addictions treatment in disadvantaged populations.
