HC3 Joint Sector Alert: Deepfake Threats

TLP:WHITE   Sep 13, 2023

On September 13, 2023, The National Security Agency (NSA), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), and the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) released a Cybersecurity Information Sheet (CSI), Contextualizing Deepfake Threats to Organizations (Attached), which provides an overview of synthetic media threats, techniques, and trends.

Threats from synthetic media, such as deepfakes, have exponentially increased presenting a growing challenge for users of modern technology and communications, including the National Security Systems (NSS), the Department of Defense (DoD), the Defense Industrial Base (DIB), and national critical infrastructure owners and operators. Between 2021 and 2022, U.S. government agencies collaborated to establish a set of employable best practices to take in preparation and response to the growing threat. Public concern around synthetic media includes disinformation operations designed to influence the public and spread false information about political, social, military, or economic issues to cause confusion, unrest, and uncertainty.
